“Give me the gift of your life’s dream, and become immortal!”

The exhibition will enable visitors to send their life’s dream into space in the form of an encrypted message. The collected life’s dreams will be dematerialized through digitization; in the form of a transmitter signal, they will be sent as pure energy on an infinite journey into space. This renders the individual messages immortal. In exchange for his or her life’s dream, every participant will receive immortality.

The current exhibition at Galerie Susanna Kulli is centered around Andreas Helbling’s installation cosmart, which will be shown in Switzerland for the first time. A walk-in structure suggesting a space capsule in the shape of a rhombicuboctahedron serves as a so-called “mobile unit.” Inside it, visitors will find a console that enables them to record their life’s dream as a text, audio, photographic, or video message. These recordings will be encrypted and transmitted directly into space. Contributors will then receive a certificate of participation including the personalized filename of the transmitted message. From then on, their digitized life’s dreams will travel through the universe, lending immortality to their authors.

Helbling emphasizes that the project’s versatility is an essential feature: “The collection of lifelong desires, created in successive simultaneity, becomes a precious archive of innumerable dreams, experiences, visions, longings, and hopes. This archive will become a legacy of contemporary human culture, unconstrained by economic, political, religious, scientific, or aesthetic interests. The selection is governed solely by the criteria the individual contributors bring to the choice and content of their message.”

In order to safeguard this valuable collection, Helbling proposes a cooperation with suitable space travel projects: “The archive might for example be stored for millions of years as a ‘treasure’ in a geostationary satellite, where a future generation would find it as an unadulterated legacy of our era.”

Andreas Helbling (b. 1967) lives and works in Zurich. He studied visual arts at the Zurich University of the Arts between 1997 and 2001. He has worked as an independent fine artist since 1998; until 2006, he collaborated with Želika Marušić.

The cosmart project was launched in 2009; that same year, it was first realized as part of

was also shown during OSTRALE 09, Dresden. Its inclusion in the current exhibition at Galerie Susanna Kulli represents the first time cosmart is being shown in Switzerland.
